VIEW OF VACATION. The London News says "it is held that bankers, clerks, cashiers and others in situations of trust, are not only entitled to occasional relaxation, but ought to be compelled to absent themselves for a time, now and then, from their places of business, because thus much fraud may be prevented. While a fraudulent person is on the spot and vigilant, he can keep his irregularities safe, but if you send him away to South-end or Herne Bay, you break the threads of his plot, and be is pretty sure to be found out, So new, a clerk who wants a boliday, seems to have a new and proud claim to one. "I should like to have a little sea air," will benceforth mean, "Examine my books, compare my balances." And a man never taking a boliday shways a bad sign-will now be almost enough to
